17. ABSTRACT (MAX. 250 WORDS)

This third factbook published by the New England Board of Higher Education presents data supplied by all colleges and universities in the New England States authorized by their State Legislatures to grant academic degrees (associate, bachelor's, and graduate). The basic facts, presented individually by institution, pertain to institutional costs (tuition, board and room for 1962-63), enrollments (autumn of 1961), accreditation, general type of curriculum, summer sessions, number of faculty members, and highest degrees held by faculty. Graphs and tables indicate some of the major features of higher education in New England.

A NOTE ABOUT THIS BOOKLET

NEW ENGLAND offers a wide range of educational opportunities to its youth, as the maps on this page illustrate. In this factbook, the New England Board of Higher Education attempts to give students, parents, educators, legislators, and laymen information about these opportunities.

The institutions listed on the following pages meet one criterion: they are authorized by their state legislatures to grant academic degrees – that is, associate (two-year) degrees, bachelor's degrees, and graduate degrees. The factbook does not list other educational institutions, such as technical institutes or vocational schools, that students may attend following high school but that are not authorized to grant degrees.

The information in this factbook was supplied to NEBHE by the institutions themselves and is explained on the opposite page. These data give basic facts about institutional costs, enrollment, accreditation, and general type of curriculum. The graphs and tables at the back of the booklet are based on these data and indicate some of the major features of higher education in New England today.

Most colleges and universities offer students a variety of programs and curricula. Unfortunately this booklet cannot list these specific curricula, but information about them can be obtained from college handbooks, college catalogues, high school guidance counselors, or the professional organizations in each field. For more information on the curriculum of any institution, write to its director of admissions.

This is the third factbook published by the New England Board of Higher Education, and we hope it will prove as useful as the two earlier editions. Because the data it contains is outdated so rapidly, however, NEBHE will publish a new edition of the factbook in 1964 in its attempt to increase the educational opportunities of New England youth and to inform the youth of the region about these opportunities.

A NOTE ABOUT NEBHE . . .

The New England Board of Higher Education was established in 1955 to provide greater educational opportunities for New England youth through the creation of a coordinated educational program in the region. Since its founding, NEBHE has served as a coordinating, research, and information agency:

- It has achieved interstate cooperation in medical education through contracts between Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, and Rhode Island and the University of Vermont College of Medicine.
- It coordinates the Regional Cooperation Program of the six state universities, through which programs in over 40 professional fields are open to students from the New England states at in-state tuition rates.
- It has helped the colleges and universities of the region cooperate in the preparation of school administrators, nurses, and college teachers.
- It has studied the dental manpower needs of New England and is currently examining the region's needs for agricultural education.
- It publishes reports, newsletters, and this factbook about higher education in New England and distributes them without charge to the public.

NEBHE's administrative costs are met by appropriations from the s states in proportion to their population. The Board consists of the fo lowing eighteen members, three from each state.
